This is a dynamic opportunity to experience the age-old practice of council and explore its modern application as a platform for genuine engagement in families, communities, businesses, schools, and relationships.

Council is a compelling process of cultivating empathic listening and heartfelt communication. Practiced around the world in communities, organizations and educational settings (including more the 50 public and private Southern California schools), council helps to nurture authentic communication, non-judgmental listening and a direct honest speaking style. Council is a practice of sharing the wisdom of one's own experience and helps create mutual understanding, build community and support the unfolding of a collective vision.

This weekend offers an introduction to and grounding in the practice of council, guided by two experienced trainers from The Ojai Foundation.

Alexis Slutzky, MFT is a community steward, council practitioner and guide dedicated to living an authentic life of interconnection. She is a council trainer and has worked as a leader with The Ojai Foundation's youth program for the past 12 years. Alexis is a Licensed Marriage Family Therapist offering nature-based programming and mentoring out of her private practice.*

Jared Seide is the Director of the Center for Council Practice, the outreach arm of The Ojai Foundation. He has coordinated, mentored and facilitated council programs at public and private schools in Southern California, initiated the "Los Angeles Council Collaborative Initiative" and leads retreats for middle and high school students. He has designed and coordinated council programs in Assisted Living facilities, community centers, prisons and non-profit organizations and social service agencies.*
