

The SLO VBC is a 4 day convergence consisting of neighborhood-based urban permaculture (organic agriculture & holistic community building) projects by day, and evening festivities that showcase local talent in the arts, and local projects and people who are helping to improve our ecological and societal infrastructure.

Each day of the convergence, neighbors and visiting friends will come together to create community spaces that feature public art, permaculture gardens, and natural building projects. Participation in these daytime events are free for everyone!

In the evening, we come together for an inspiring conference, community gathering, and incredible music in the style of a mini-festival. These evenings begin with a community dinner at 6pm, workshops at 7pm and music at 8pm. The tickets for these evening events are affordable and help to support our place-making and community-building service work.

Get Involved!
